

LONGWORTH ARMED WITH HIS LICENSE

Gets Document Amidst Banter of Friends.

ONE DOLLAR THE PRICE

Clerk Doesn't Ask Color of Contracting Parties—Carries Parchment Away in His Auto.

Representative Longworth, accompanied by several friends, appeared at the office of the clerk of the Supreme Court, in the City Hall, yesterday afternoon, and procured a license to marry for Miss Alice Roosevelt and himself. The party went to the City Hall in two automobiles, arriving there about a quarter of an hour after business hours. John R. Young, clerk of the Supreme Court of the District, was, however, informed of Mr. Longworth's intention to apply for a license and he and all the employees in the office awaited the arrival of the party.

Friends in Good Humor.
Mr. Longworth was accompanied by Nelson Perkins, who will act as his best man at the wedding tomorrow at high noon; Messrs. Bangs, Shaw, Norman, and four or five other friends. The party was in the best of humor and took great pleasure in bantering the groom-elect.

One of his friends was particularly anxious to know if Mr. Longworth had "the price" with him with which to settle for the license. Another intimated that he answered nervously to the question propounded him by Assistant Clerk William F. Lemon, and said he should have brought his voice with him on such an occasion. Finally, when the license was made out each one of the party insisted that he be allowed to pay for it, but Mr. Longworth insisted upon settling with the clerk himself.

It will be noticed that the application is made by N. Longworth and the applicant signed his name Nicholas Longworth.

When this was observed by one of the party he asked why he did not have it made out to just "plain Nick."

Clerk Lemon asked Mr. Longworth the usual questions as to his age, place of residence, relationship of the contracting parties. But accidentally or purposely he did not ask Mr. Longworth anything concerning his color. One of his friends noticed this, and jokingly asked Mr. Lemon the applicant would not have to swear to his color. Mr. Lemon explained it was not necessary under the circumstances.

This practically concluded the legal part of the affair. Mr. Longworth's friends, however, were not done with it, and kept up a running fire of bantering while the party was leaving the building.

When the license was secured Mr. Longworth and his friends left the city hall and returning to their automobiles went back to their respective hotels.

The license is directed to the Rt. Rev. Henry V. Satterlee, bishop of the Episcopal diocese of Washington, who will officiate at the marriage.

OBSTREPEROUS FRESHIE IS GIVEN A HAIRCUT

CINCINNATI, Feb. 16.—The rule laid down last September by the university authorities, forbidding their victory in the flag rush, prohibiting all "freshies" from wearing derby hats or smoking cigarettes was vigorously enforced when Clarence Howard, a bold freshman, lost all of his hair as the result of his failure to abide by the law.

This rule, so the upper classmen claim, holds good until February 22, but Howard had grown tired of wearing soft hats and college caps, and accordingly put in his appearance at the university smoking a "dope stick" and wearing a brand-new derby. He was promptly set upon by a band of sophomores as he was leaving a history class and taken to the humming room for trial.

Robert O'Connell, a junior, was selected as judge, and, after a fair hearing, Howard was pronounced guilty and was given a close hair cut. A number of co-eds were then invited into the room and he was forced to render a political oration.

Such, they say, will be the fate of every freshman who breaks this rule before it expires on Washington's Birthday.

PHOTOGRAPHIC REPRODUCTION OF THE LICENSE ISSUED FOR THE LONGWORTH-ROOSEVELT MARRIAGE

Marriage Too Easy, Reflects McAdoo

Would Like to Have Matrimonial Commission Examine All Candidates Before Entering the Married State.

NEW YORK, Feb. 16.—"Marriage is too easy," said William McAdoo, ex-commissioner of police, in the course of a discourse at the first annual entertainment of the John Hay Literary Society of the Young Men's Hebrew Association, at Ninety-second street and Lexington avenue, on the decisions a young man has to make—the marriage question, the choice of a career, and the opportunities of politics.

"Marriage," he said, "should be made more difficult. It may be a dream, but I would like to see a matrimonial commission to examine every candidate for marriage mentally, morally, and otherwise. If it was made impossible for the ceremony to be performed in the middle of the night by a sleepy alderman or a complaisant parson, there would be cowboys on the divorce court."

Mr. McAdoo talked until William H. Mitchell, superintendent of the association, reminded him there was a long program still to be run through. He hardly referred to police affairs, except to remark:

"Nothing to Say."

"I will say nothing of the police except to join in the familiar chorus of today, 'Nothing to say.'"

Mr. McAdoo urged the importance of right ideals, and said: "You are a part of the world, not the world itself. Take the broader view. I venture to say that Mr. Schiff, as he sits back in the solitude of his room, is prouder of having given his building to the association than of any of his business deals."

"Don't believe all you read. As a race you are the most intellectual people I know, and have marvelously patient and studious habits. But you are carried away by what you read, and some of you are too young to digest the tremendous books you read. I heard a boy of nine ask for Herbert Spencer at the Educational Alliance, and another of ten, only a year from a Russian village, was making a critical study of the battle of Saratoga in order to understand the character of Benedict Arnold."

Yellow and Black Journals.
"There are two sorts of newspapers in this city—yellow and black. Black journalism is one long wall. Everything is going to a place we don't mention in the Young Men's Hebrew Association, and there are no good men and very few good women. Read discriminately. There was one boy when I was commissioner sentenced to twenty-five years in the State prison for burglary. He had two cravings, for cigarettes and 'ectrics.' He had literally read himself into crime by reading a number of books on sociology until he was eaten up with discontent."

NEW MATRIMONIAL RECORD.

Is matrimony a failure?
Ask Mrs. Yerkes-Mizner or Mrs. Sewell-McDaniel.

Left a widow on December 23, Mrs. Yerkes became Mrs. Mizner in January—the latter part of the month.

Left a widow February 3, Mrs. Sewell, of Swainsboro, Ga., became Mrs. McDaniel February 4.

The Georgia woman is believed to have established a world-record.

The twins seem to consider matrimony a success.

STRIKING CHURCH DECORATIONS.

"Jimmy," "Marguerite," "Willie." These and probably twenty other names are scrawled in chalk on the red brick front of a church building on Grand River avenue.

Some of the names are written in letters a foot high.

The inscriptions do not delight the eyes of the members and attendants of the church.

Even the unregenerate remark "What had boys?"

For it is the decorative work of the boy who behind the chalk—several of them.—Detroit News.

FORTUNE IN JEWELS HIDDEN IN CLOTHES

Young Foreigners at Philadelphia Dock Had Five Thousand Dollars' Worth About Them.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Feb. 16.—Two smugglers with fully $5,000 worth of diamonds and jewelry sewed in the lining of their coats, were caught by custom inspectors in the immigration station at the foot of Washington avenue. The two men, Emil and Franz Perlinsky, steamer passengers on the steamship Havertord, were immediately arrested.

Chief Custom Inspector William McGuire and Inspector William Finletter were going through the luggage of the men, who are Germans, and the behavior of the younger one, Franz, who is only twenty, aroused their suspicions.

It was decided to make a search of their clothes. In a short time thirty-seven neckties, rings, watch chains, and other jeweled trinkets were brought to light. These had been distributed between the two smugglers, and although a few of them were found in their pockets, most of the larger pieces were sewed into the lining of their coats.

Their smiles as they saw that they were caught "with the goods" on them.

The men gave their address as 114 East 10th street, New York. The custom inspectors, however, say that the elder of the two, Emil, who is thirty-two, conducts a jewelry shop in New York.

The fourth entry will be Edda of Widbourne, a brindle puppy bitch.

Besides seeking individual honors the four Widbourne dogs will go after the prize offered for the best team exhibited at the show.

SAD DANES FOLLOW CORTEGE OF KING

Body of Christian Removed to Roskilde With Magnificent Funeral Pomp—Monarch's Riddle's Charger Led by Grooms Behind Hearse.

COPENHAGEN, Denmark, Feb. 16.—The body of the late King Christian was removed today from Copenhagen to Roskilde, on the island of Zealand, the ancient capital of Denmark, where most of the Danish monarchs are buried previous to the internment, which will take place on Sunday.

The hearse in which the body was conveyed was escorted from the palace chapel by soldiers and sailors. The cortege was headed by Hussars and field artillery. The horses which drew the hearse were led by grooms dressed in mourning.

The hearse was flanked on either side by twelve officers of the army and navy as halberdiers, and behind the funeral car the favorite horse of the deceased monarch was led by two grooms.

The mourning coach followed next King Frederick, the new ruler, riding alone. Then came other coaches containing other royal mourners, including King Haakon, of Norway, who arrived this morning.

All business was suspended and the streets of the city were draped in black. The streets were densely packed with people, who appeared in mourning dress.

BOYS SWEAR TWO WOMEN THREW CHILD IN LAKE

Chicago Police Cannot Find Body, But Youngsters Stick to Story Under All Tests.

CHICAGO, Feb. 16.—Neither able to find any trace of a child, who is said to have been thrown into the lake by two women, nor able to make two schoolboys who told the story of supposed murder retract a word of their statements, the Hyde Park police have a baffling mystery on hand.

Alonso Davis and Charlie Maugh, each fourteen years old, told their parents that they saw two women leading a child, dressed in a blue coat, on the pier at Fifty-first street, and return from the water's edge without the boy and evidently quarreling.

Although the boys were examined separately, their stories were identical.

ALCOHOL RAG CAUSED FIRE.

A rag saturated with alcohol, coming in contact with a lighted gas jet, started a fire in the home of Horace Atkinson, at 805 Nineteenth street northwest, about 10 o'clock yesterday evening. The blaze damaged the furniture to the extent of $25, but was extinguished by the fire department before any headway was gained.

THE DOMESTIC KIND.

"Do you go in much for athletics?" said Mrs. Dubbs.

"My, yes," said her old friend. "I married a man that can't afford to keep a girl."—Detroit Free Press.
